The Story of Sealants Everybody's teeth have little pits and grooves. When kids eat, these pits get little pieces

Everybody's teeth have little pits and grooves. When kids eat, these pits get little pieces of food stuck in them. If that happens, bacteria start making strong acids. That weakens the tooth's enamel. What happens? Cavities!

That's why dentists use special dental materials called sealants. The dentist paints the sealant into those grooves. This seals the tooth's surface. Food and bacteria can't hang in there anymore. What happens now? Fewer cavities! And sealants last for years and years.
